City of Stratford Children's Resource Consultant Program

FRIENDSHIPS - Stage by Stage

- Baby's secure relationship with parents and teachers lay the groundwork for later friendships with peers.
- After 18 months, Toddlers begin to develop more awareness of other people's feelings and begin to feel empathy for others.
- Two year-olds can make important friendships that last for years.
- As a result of limited communication skills, friendships among Three-year olds tend to be more fleeting.
- Four-year olds are beginning to form strong attachments to special friends.
- At this stage of development, Four year olds are just beginning to be able to see things from another's perspective, making their friendships more workable.

FRIENDSHIPS - Stage by Stage

- Baby's secure relationship with parents and teachers lay the groundwork for later friendships with peers.
- After 18 months, Toddlers begin to develop more awareness of other people's feelings and begin to feel empathy for others.
- Two year-olds can make important friendships that last for years.
- As a result of limited communication skills, friendships among Three-year olds tend to be more fleeting.
- Four-year olds are beginning to form strong attachments to special friends.
- At this stage of development, Four year olds are just beginning to be able to see things from another's perspective, making their friendships more workable.